

ARGUS: Auditing Causal Identification in Environmental Policy Evaluation

Identification credibility varies across policy contexts, assumptions and evidence

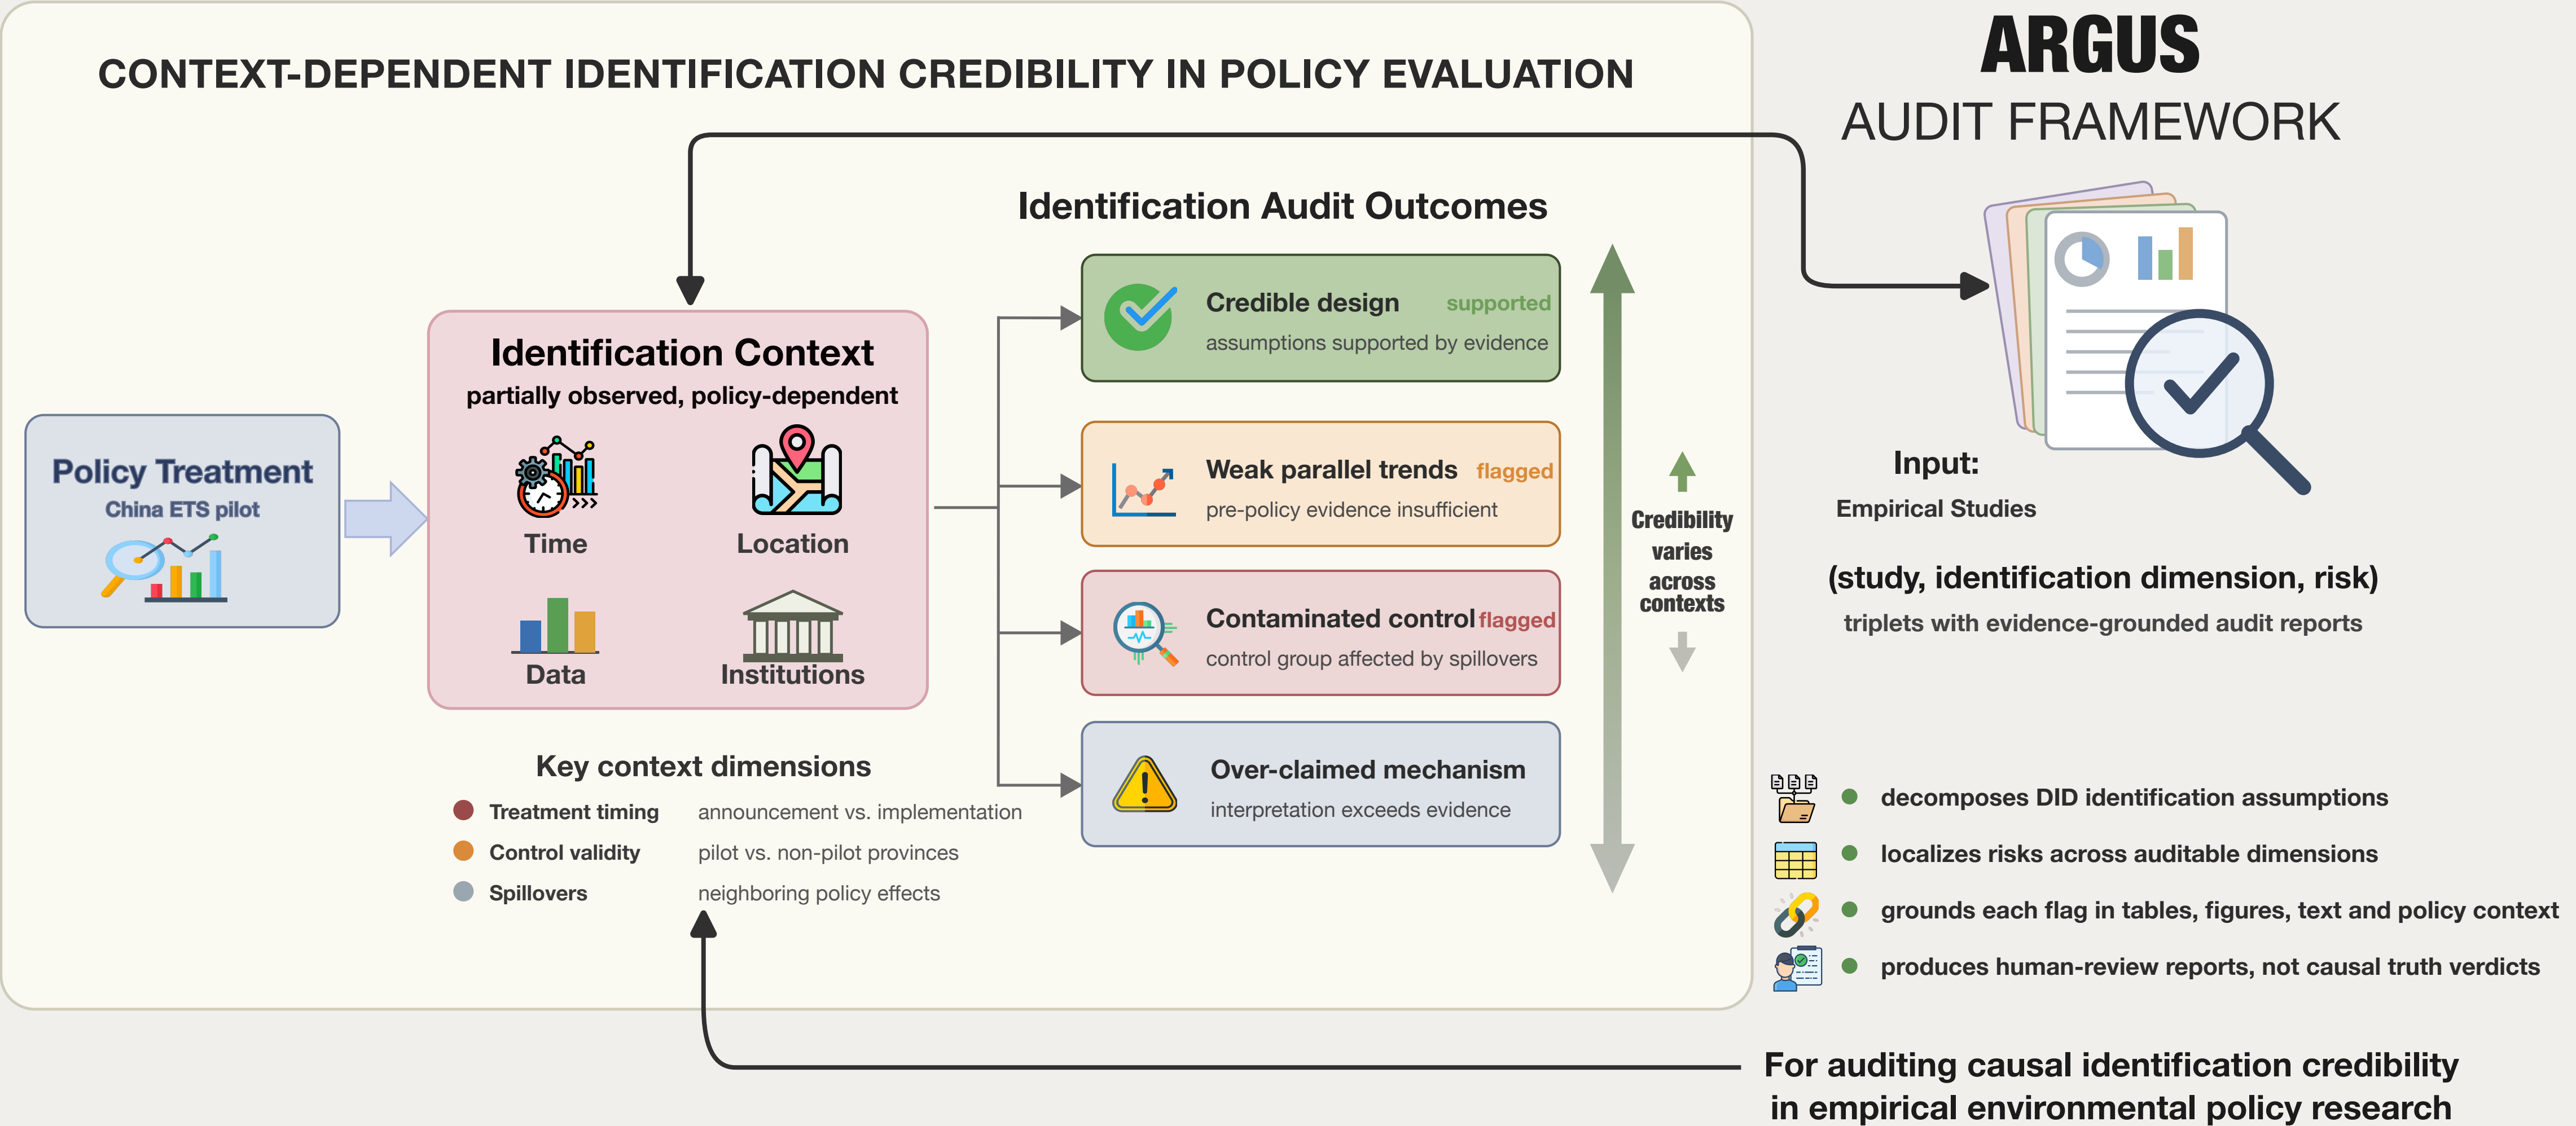

Figure 1 | Context-dependent identification credibility in empirical environmental policy evaluation. Causal identification risks vary across treatment timing, control-group validity, spillovers, concurrent policies and other contexts, which the ARGUS framework audits by decomposing assumptions and localizing evidence-based risk flags in empirical studies.